Section III: Other issues

7. Are there any other issues regarding the Proposal to change trading hours that HKEx should consider?

These changes will require many system changes and tests to the industry, thus potentially create operational risk to the market for a period of time. We suspect the changes for small local brokers could impose heavy load on their operations.

Out of the two perceived benefits of doing these changes: 1) align with the Chinese market and 2) more liquidity into HKEx; we believe that 1 will be good but 2 will be hard to realise. We don't believe longer trading hours will correlate necessarily with more total liquidity, in fact it may effectively spread the same liquidity through longer trading hours and make liquidity less available at any point in time during the day, which can then increase implicit trading impact and keep permanent impact intact.

More liquidity could be sped up into the market through best execution measures such as introduction of CCP, lowering effective CCASS fee (and other fees), more broker internalisation, removal of broker identifier on the order book etc.
