	I think maintaining Investor protection of one share one vote is more important than changing the rules to be 'competitive'. Many Exchanges especially in the US are looking after than their own interest and that of their shareholders' instead of the investor public. Look at the issues they have with the Dark Pool, High frequent trades etc The description in the book "Flash Boys" has already started the regulators to look at the way the Exchanges have acted. Having a WVR structure is tilting the scale in favour of the listed companies and is not a fair act. For HK ,unlike other commercial exchanges,maintaining the Publc interest (investor protection) is the primary goal of the Exchange and I truly think sticking to this principle has helped Hong Kong attain it's position today and will help Hong Kong to stand out among the other Exchanges in the long run.
	-			remaining questions if you believe there are circumstances in which owed to use WVR structures.
