It is important to require listed companies to disclose such information, in particular “Aspect B8: Community Investment” as it is useful for investors to evaluate the companies’ performance on social capital building, as a result of community investment, that contributes to the sustainable development of the society.

Workplace quality, operating practices and most importantly, community involvement, are all key social responsibilities of corporations and the three do have synergy if practices together well. Through community involvement, the listed companies could build social capital, namely the mutual support networks and norms of trust and reciprocity, both within the company and the community at large. So, it is important that the listed companies report the social capital they built through community investment and other activities that enhance the quality of their workplace and operations.

Yes

No

Please give reasons for your views.
