We support the proposal to require issuers to have a diversity policy and disclose said policy in their corporate governance reports, but we would like to recommend that LGBT+ be included as a diversity criteria.

Boardroom diversity is a topic that has gained significant traction — with institutional investors, among good governance proponents, and in the general and business media. The conversations have touched on various aspects of diversity, including gender, race/ethnicity, age, industry, and expertise. LGBT+ diversity, however, has largely been left out of the conversation.

As noted in the Commonsense Principles of Governance, developed by business leaders including Warren Buffett and Jamie Dimon of J.P. Morgan, "Diversity along multiple dimensions is critical to a high-functioning board". This is consistent with the numerous studies showing a correlation between gender diversity on the board and corporate performance. Large institutional investors, such as BlackRock and State Street, have made board diversity a priority as a matter of their fiduciary duty to act in the interests of their investors.

Given the larger sample size and greater availability of data, studies assessing the correlation between board diversity and corporate performance have tended to focus on gender. While the precise reason for the positive correlation between gender diversity and better corporate performance is unknown, many of the reasons that gender diversity is considered beneficial are also applicable to LGBT+ diversity. LGBT+ diversity in the boardroom may create a dynamic that enables better decision-making, and it brings to the boardroom the perspective of a community that is a critical component of the company's consumer population and organizational talent.

Boards are, at their core, teams. Research comparing decision-making between diverse and non-diverse groups clearly indicates that diverse groups make better decisions. Indeed, one prominent study found that non-diverse groups made wrong decisions more often than diverse group, and were more confident in those decisions. There is a healthy tension that develops when a diverse member joins a group, which leads to more careful information processing and the generation of new ideas. While the studies were performed using gender diversity, it is not much of a leap to assume that LGBT+ diversity would have at least the same effect.

Boards that lack a LGBT+ lens on their business may overlook important risks and opportunities. According to a recent Credit Suisse study, an index of LGBT+ inclusive companies outperformed the broader MSCI ACWI index by an average of 3.0% per annum. The LGBT+ consumer and talent markets are also becoming increasingly important. The purchasing power of the LGBT+ community in the U.S. is estimated to be $917 billion, with global purchasing power standing at $5.7 trillion. Per a recent Harris Poll, 20% of respondents aged 18-34 (Millennials) identified as LGBT+. Companies cannot afford to ignore this cohort as it enters the labor force and consumer market. And they cannot afford to ignore the value of a LGBT+ diverse board – both from the perspective that is added to the boardroom discussion and the message that it sends about the company to current and prospective employees and consumers.

3.	Do you agree with our proposal to amend CP A.5.5 that it requires (on a "comply or explain" basis) the board to state in the circular to shareholders accompanying the resolution to elect the director:
	 (i) the process used for identifying the nominee; (ii) the perspectives, skills and experience that the person is expected to bring to the board; and (iii) how the nominee would contribute to the diversity of the board.
